Capt, James Oyster, in approving the letter of Supt. Chancellor, requesting the dismissal of Cardoza for disloyalty to his superfor officers and for the good of the service, said that in his mind there was no doubt the facts set forth were true and that Principal Cardeza was not wanted. He said that he had found condi-tions needed a remedy. Demoralization, insubordination, and disrespect to su-periors, he said, existed, and that without steps of this kind it would be impossible to regulate the school system. Boards in Conference.

He also quoted the laws relative to the fact that Cardoza was not allowed to say anything as to the accusations made against him, and was denied a trial.

Although Mr. Cardoza was represented by his attorney, Henry E. Cobb, the board would not allow anything to be said by counsel, other than setting forth the reasons why he should be heard. Mr. Cobb said several courses of redress were open to Cardoza, to have the proceedings reviewed by the courts or institute sul against every member of the board. conference of the friends of the dismisse teacher will be held this afternoon.

RESOLUTION WELL SUPPORTED

Representative Fogler Discusses Proposed Asset Currency and Denounces Existing Law on Subject as Born of the Ignorance and Prejudice of Andrew Jackson.

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 17 .- The principal address before the American Bankers' Association to-day was that of Congressnan Charles N. Fogler, of New Jersey, chairman of the House Committee on Banking and Currency. He advocated an asset currency, the banks to issue For an hour he conducted what amounted to a financial school, answering questions and repeating portions of his address. He was liberally applauded, particularly when he said that the existing currency system was born of poor judgment and that Andrew Jackson, when he overthrew the United States Bank, was governed by passion and extreme ignerance of finance.

The afternoon session brought forth the first widespread discussion and divergence of opinion on elastic currency which is bound to flash up if the question ever came to an abrupt close on Monday with was an attempt to pass a resolution subthe association to the stand that Con-Mrs. Wister has not only not lost her gress should permit national banks to ount national bank notes as reserve.
